Ms Hanny Kadijk

Tourism Research Projects, Stenden University of Applied Sciences, the Netherlands

As a student of Human Geography, Hanny Kadijk developed an interest in tourism, tourist destinations and the various ways in which humans interact with their environment.

After her graduation in 1992, Hanny worked as a Researcher and Project Manager at Stenden University of Applied Sciences. Hanny is currently coordinator of all research related activities in the Bachelor's programme in International Tourism Management and is the Course Leader of the Master's programme in International Leisure and Tourism Studies.

Hanny has been involved in a variety of research projects, mostly carried out with Bachelor and Masters students.

Within the module 'Tourism Research Projects', Bachelor students acquire project management and practical research skills. Students work on research projects which are developed and executed in collaboration with internal and/or external organisations and companies.
