

Pham Viet Ha

class 30

The Green period is the trainee's last six months at KOTO. In this period trainees transit into the Independent Living stage where they move out of KOTO housing to live outside. The aim, during this final phase, is to support trainees with soft skills and practical skills they would need for entering the work place. These include independent living skills such as forward planning, time management and budgeting. They also study Job Search skills covering resume writing, sourcing jobs, and undergoing practice interviews.

The Green period also opens a next chapter of real professional training for trainees as they will take turn in groups to do three months work experience at an international hotel and an up market, stand alone restaurant. During work experience, trainees will work in shifts

INDEPENDENT LIVING

Ha has become more involved with the group after living independently. He always tried to overcome difficulties in living with others and to manage conflicts within the group. He became more proactive and responsible with his role in life and in work.

WORK EXPERIENCE

During the internship, Ha acted professionally, had a gentle attitude, and collaborated with customers and colleagues. He integrated quickly to his new working environment. He is very hard-working and eager to learn from his colleagues. He is also good at complying with the rules of the restaurant.

LIFE SKILLS

Ha has a good attitude toward the work. He attended all group activities, but has not been responsible or engaged in the work. He also needs to ensure he speaks at clearly and at an appropriate volume to best serve customers.

GREEN PROJECT

Ha participated in the Cleaning Storage Project. During the project Ha's group made some contributions. Although Ha was the class leader he he did not show many leadership skills. He was not successful in engaging other trainees. In the final report, Ha participated in the presentation. He still needs to be more confident and create more well-structured content. The group finally resulted in earning 2.8 million VND for the class fund.
